

The Georgia Department of Community Health (DCH) created the H1N1 Influenza Vaccine Provider Locator to inform Georgia residents about which health care providers will provide the H1N1 vaccine as supplies become available.

The allocations the state has received thus far have been small in comparison to the number of providers registered to administer the vaccine. This is why it is so important for anyone wishing to receive the vaccine to contact his or her family doctor's office or health care provider before making an appointment or traveling to the provider's office.

All the health care providers listed on the H1N1 Influenza Vaccine Provider Locator have signed written agreements to provide H1N1 vaccines as it becomes available and to be included in this listing. The following should also be noted:

- Participating county health departments are also included in the listing.
- At this time, small amounts of the H1N1 vaccine are being allocated by the CDC.
- Additional supply is anticipated over the next weeks and months.
- Health care providers receive their vaccine supply directly from the CDC's distributor, McKesson.

DCH is dedicated to keeping Georgia residents informed and healthy during this flu season and will continue to do so through our health initiatives including the Public Health H1N1 Information Website, the "Roll Up Your Sleeve" outreach campaign, worksite wellness programs and the 2009 Shoo Flu, Shoo Art Contest.
